City of Little Rock and Little Rock School District Collaborate to Bring Green Spaces to School Grounds

(Little Rock)— On Earth Day, Thursday, April 22, the City of Little Rock and the Little Rock School District (LRSD) announced a community schools initiative to transform the grounds of two community schools, Booker T. Washington Elementary and Stephens Elementary, into nature-filled greenspaces. The enhancements will provide more opportunity for children to connect to the natural world and enjoy healthy, active time outdoors.

Little Rock was one of 10 cities chosen from 27 applicants to receive training and technical assistance to add nature play and outdoor learning spaces to schoolyards through Cities Connecting Children to Nature \(CCCN\), a joint initiative of the National League of Cities and the Children & Nature Network. The effort prioritized schools in neighborhoods that lack access to parks and greenspace.

"In the Community Schools Model, the school becomes the hub of the community where programs that meet the needs of the entire neighborhood are offered at the school site," Chief Education Officer Jay Barth said. "It's crucial that parents and community members feel drawn to spend time at the school and on the school grounds. This technical assistance will guide the Little Rock team in making two community schools operating in our most densely populated neighborhoods to become that kind of welcoming spaces for those neighbors."

"Not only are schoolyards the daily playground to our students, but it is the playground for the community," Darian Smith, LRSD's executive director for Elementary School Leadership, said. "The green schoolyard initiative will give us an opportunity to enhance that experience for everyone. We are grateful for the ongoing partnership between the District and the City of Little Rock."

Research shows that green schoolyards can enhance children's physical and mental health and academic performance, as well as community health and well-being. These green schoolyards will be used for outdoor learning and play during the school day and be available to children, families and surrounding neighborhoods during out-of-school time.

As part of the application process, Mayor Frank Scott, Jr. and LRSD Superintendent Michael Poore signed a green schoolyard pledge stating their shared vision to advance equitable access to nature's benefits through green schoolyards, which are proven to bring a wide-range of health, academic and environmental benefits to children and the local community.

During the past year, the COVID-19 pandemic highlighted the importance of access to safe, outdoor greenspaces within walking distance. Green schoolyards can fill a critical gap in neighborhoods that lack access to parks and natural areas due to inequities in how parks and greenspaces have been designed and distributed. City and school officials see green schoolyards as a key way to build back stronger and more equitably after COVID-19.

A CCCN Green Schoolyards team will be assembled with members from LRSD, including Washington and Stephens school communities, and Little Rock's Parks and Recreation Department. The team will receive training and technical support from national experts to create a green schoolyard plan that ensures the schoolyards at Washington and Stephens meets community needs for stormwater capture, pollinator habitat, vegetable gardening, and a space to learn and explore.

Dear Mayor Scott and Members of the Board of Directors,

In 2020, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit issued an opinion that challenged the legality of the two-year “blackout” period for contributions to political campaigns in Arkansas. The City’s campaign finance ordinance limited collections to the period from June 1 to the election, and then until December 1 after the election in order to resolve any campaign debt. When the City’s ordinance was enacted, this was believed to be a reasonable period of time. Since that time, however, the courts have been more restrictive absent evidence of actual corruption. Of course, with some limits on campaign contributions, the prohibition of using campaign funds for personal use, and the requirement to report all campaign contributions, and not to accept certain contributions, such a burden is virtually impossible to meet. The attached opinion discusses this fact in terms of the City’s ordinance.

One major difference is that exploratory committees did not exist when the City’s ordinance was in place. For example, an exploratory committee for a board position can begin collections up to two years before the election (if that date range still exists), which seems to place some candidates at a disadvantage. In addition, the Eighth Circuit has ruled that a person is a candidate virtually by stating an intent to run for office and nothing more.

After reading the opinion, please let me know if you have any questions.
